What People Need to Know Today

When: Wednesday, May 29, 2019

Where: U.S. Chamber of Commerce headquarters, Washington, D.C.

Who: Presented by the Center for IP Understanding (CIPU) in conjunction with the Global Innovation Policy Center (GIPC)

Summary

Trade secrets, also known as know-how or “show-how,” are among intellectual property’s most valuable and misunderstood rights.

In 2016 came under federal law. US-China trade negotiations have been at the center of what is considered acceptable trade secret practice.

Unlocking the Secret to Trade Secrets – What People Need to Know Today, a luncheon briefing, will help to put these critical intellectual property rights into context.

It will clarify (1) what trade secrets are, (2) why they are more important today, (3) how they are used and (4) their impact on innovation, competition and trade. Panel coverage will include:

- Trade secrets’ role in promoting commerce and security
- The hidden value of “negative” know-how
- How trade secrets compliment patents and trademarks; their drawbacks
- U.S., China and trade secrets today
